

Dream place, in Glen Burnie

Over 120 Home Depot and KaBoom and 100 Salvation Army volunteers spent a day building a 2,000-square-foot playground recently at The Salvation Army Glen Burnie, Md., Boys & Girls Club. Thousands of pounds of mulch and cement, gallons and gallons of paint and hundreds of flowers, bushes and other items were used to construct and erect two park benches, three trash can covers, a picnic table, a playground complete with a miniature rock-wall, sliding board and zip chord, all surrounded by a beautiful flower bed – all donated and created by a community of caring volunteers. The $55,000 project was designed with input from the youth members of the Glen Burnie club – although the club's executive director, Wanda Newton, noted that the suggested hot tub with sliding board was not incorporated into the final design.
